Z = (data point in the sample – population mean) / standard deviation
How far is our value in the sample from the center of the population considering the amount of spread in the population?

T = How far is our sample mean from the population mean taking into account the average spread in the sample data?